Admiral's College Days. Admiral Sotokichi Urlu, who is winfiling distinction in the Japanese navy, received his nautical education at Annapolis, where he took high standing and was popular with his classmates, says the Saimday Evening Post. He was noted for studying hard and for great conscientionsness in the performance of the thousand and one duties of the naval cadet. Not long after entering and while our language was still largely a mystery to him he was one day confined to his room by a slight litness. He was looked after by the surpeon, and his condition became a matter of record. Nevertheless he felt moved to send explanations to a favorite instructor, and did so as follows: My Teacher-You have seen that I do not stand before you. I am inclosed in the room by the much sickness. I do not feel like making the stir. I regret to miss your most beautiful instruction of the mathematic. Tomorrow I hope greatly to find it easy to make the stir. From his achievements in the present war the admiral seems to be in full possession of his ability to "make the
